

Redkite

supporting children, young people and their families facing cancer

Today in Australia, five families will be told their child has cancer.

No matter where they are, with your help Redkite is there for them.

Treatment can last for weeks, months or years. We're there with support for as long as it takes.

Today, more than 40,000 people are living with the effects of childhood cancer.

together we can make a difference

When a child or young person (0-24 years) is diagnosed with cancer, essential support is available for the weeks, months or years ahead – from the moment of diagnosis, throughout treatment and beyond.

Redkite provides:

emotional support and counselling

A diagnosis of cancer is a crisis that impacts every aspect of life. Our skilled and caring social workers provide information, support and professional counselling not just for children and young people facing cancer, but for their families and caregivers too. This includes siblings and grandparents. They are available face to face and by phone or email, enabling us to reach families who need us including those who are remote or who prefer not to travel

financial assistance

Cancer is expensive, often bringing extra financial demands at a time when parents often must stop work, and lose income to be at their child's bedside. For young people living independently, financial pressures can be even greater. Financial assistance helps with the must-haves including food, electricity, accommodation and travel expenses.

education and career support

Cancer is extremely disruptive to education and employment for young people, both in the short term and potentially for life. Redkite's Education and Career Consultants work directly with young people, and along with our Education Grants and Scholarships helps them connect to meaningful education pathways. Career dreams and aspirations often have to change post cancer, so this support is vital and helps to build a hopeful future.

bereavement support

The grief that follows a child's or young person's death never goes away. Many bereaved parents, partners and siblings speak of deep loneliness. Bereavement counselling, individual support and group support are provided to families to help them find ways to live with grief and manage life, for as long as they need.

Redkite

supporting children, young people and their families facing cancer

Today in Australia, five families will be told their child has cancer.

No matter where they are, with your help Redkite is there for them.

Treatment can last for weeks, months or years. We're there with support for as long as it takes.

Today, more than 40,000 people are living with the effects of childhood cancer.

together we can make a difference

When a child or young person (0-24 years) is diagnosed with cancer, essential support is available for the weeks, months or years ahead – from the moment of diagnosis, throughout treatment and beyond.

Redkite provides:

emotional support and counselling

A diagnosis of cancer is a crisis that impacts every aspect of life. Our skilled and caring social workers provide information, support and professional counselling not just for children and young people facing cancer, but for their families and caregivers too. This includes siblings and grandparents. They are available face to face and by phone or email, enabling us to reach families who need us including those who are remote or who prefer not to travel

financial assistance

Cancer is expensive, often bringing extra financial demands at a time when parents often must stop work, and lose income to be at their child's bedside. For young people living independently, financial pressures can be even greater. Financial assistance helps with the must-haves including food, electricity, accommodation and travel expenses.

education and career support

Cancer is extremely disruptive to education and employment for young people, both in the short term and potentially for life. Redkite's Education and Career Consultants work directly with young people, and along with our Education Grants and Scholarships helps them connect to meaningful education pathways. Career dreams and aspirations often have to change post cancer, so this support is vital and helps to build a hopeful future.

bereavement support

The grief that follows a child's or young person's death never goes away. Many bereaved parents, partners and siblings speak of deep loneliness. Bereavement counselling, individual support and group support are provided to families to help them find ways to live with grief and manage life, for as long as they need.

Redkite

supporting children, young people and their families facing cancer

Today in Australia, five families will be told their child has cancer.

No matter where they are, with your help Redkite is there for them.

Treatment can last for weeks, months or years. We're there with support for as long as it takes.

Today, more than 40,000 people are living with the effects of childhood cancer.

together we can make a difference

When a child or young person (0-24 years) is diagnosed with cancer, essential support is available for the weeks, months or years ahead – from the moment of diagnosis, throughout treatment and beyond.

Redkite provides:

emotional support and counselling

A diagnosis of cancer is a crisis that impacts every aspect of life. Our skilled and caring social workers provide information, support and professional counselling not just for children and young people facing cancer, but for their families and caregivers too. This includes siblings and grandparents. They are available face to face and by phone or email, enabling us to reach families who need us including those who are remote or who prefer not to travel

financial assistance

Cancer is expensive, often bringing extra financial demands at a time when parents often must stop work, and lose income to be at their child's bedside. For young people living independently, financial pressures can be even greater. Financial assistance helps with the must-haves including food, electricity, accommodation and travel expenses.

education and career support

Cancer is extremely disruptive to education and employment for young people, both in the short term and potentially for life. Redkite's Education and Career Consultants work directly with young people, and along with our Education Grants and Scholarships helps them connect to meaningful education pathways. Career dreams and aspirations often have to change post cancer, so this support is vital and helps to build a hopeful future.

bereavement support

The grief that follows a child's or young person's death never goes away. Many bereaved parents, partners and siblings speak of deep loneliness. Bereavement counselling, individual support and group support are provided to families to help them find ways to live with grief and manage life, for as long as they need.

Redkite

supporting children, young people and their families facing cancer

Today in Australia, five families will be told their child has cancer.

No matter where they are, with your help Redkite is there for them.

Treatment can last for weeks, months or years. We're there with support for as long as it takes.

Today, more than 40,000 people are living with the effects of childhood cancer.

together we can make a difference

When a child or young person (0-24 years) is diagnosed with cancer, essential support is available for the weeks, months or years ahead – from the moment of diagnosis, throughout treatment and beyond.

Redkite provides:

emotional support and counselling

A diagnosis of cancer is a crisis that impacts every aspect of life. Our skilled and caring social workers provide information, support and professional counselling not just for children and young people facing cancer, but for their families and caregivers too. This includes siblings and grandparents. They are available face to face and by phone or email, enabling us to reach families who need us including those who are remote or who prefer not to travel

financial assistance

Cancer is expensive, often bringing extra financial demands at a time when parents often must stop work, and lose income to be at their child's bedside. For young people living independently, financial pressures can be even greater. Financial assistance helps with the must-haves including food, electricity, accommodation and travel expenses.

education and career support

Cancer is extremely disruptive to education and employment for young people, both in the short term and potentially for life. Redkite's Education and Career Consultants work directly with young people, and along with our Education Grants and Scholarships helps them connect to meaningful education pathways. Career dreams and aspirations often have to change post cancer, so this support is vital and helps to build a hopeful future.

bereavement support

The grief that follows a child's or young person's death never goes away. Many bereaved parents, partners and siblings speak of deep loneliness. Bereavement counselling, individual support and group support are provided to families to help them find ways to live with grief and manage life, for as long as they need.

Redkite

supporting children, young people and their families facing cancer

Today in Australia, five families will be told their child has cancer.

No matter where they are, with your help Redkite is there for them.

Treatment can last for weeks, months or years. We're there with support for as long as it takes.

Today, more than 40,000 people are living with the effects of childhood cancer.

together we can make a difference

When a child or young person (0-24 years) is diagnosed with cancer, essential support is available for the weeks, months or years ahead – from the moment of diagnosis, throughout treatment and beyond.

Redkite provides:

emotional support and counselling

A diagnosis of cancer is a crisis that impacts every aspect of life. Our skilled and caring social workers provide information, support and professional counselling not just for children and young people facing cancer, but for their families and caregivers too. This includes siblings and grandparents. They are available face to face and by phone or email, enabling us to reach families who need us including those who are remote or who prefer not to travel

financial assistance

Cancer is expensive, often bringing extra financial demands at a time when parents often must stop work, and lose income to be at their child's bedside. For young people living independently, financial pressures can be even greater. Financial assistance helps with the must-haves including food, electricity, accommodation and travel expenses.

education and career support

Cancer is extremely disruptive to education and employment for young people, both in the short term and potentially for life. Redkite's Education and Career Consultants work directly with young people, and along with our Education Grants and Scholarships helps them connect to meaningful education pathways. Career dreams and aspirations often have to change post cancer, so this support is vital and helps to build a hopeful future.

bereavement support

The grief that follows a child's or young person's death never goes away. Many bereaved parents, partners and siblings speak of deep loneliness. Bereavement counselling, individual support and group support are provided to families to help them find ways to live with grief and manage life, for as long as they need.

Redkite

supporting children, young people and their families facing cancer

Today in Australia, five families will be told their child has cancer.

No matter where they are, with your help Redkite is there for them.

Treatment can last for weeks, months or years. We're there with support for as long as it takes.

Today, more than 40,000 people are living with the effects of childhood cancer.

together we can make a difference

When a child or young person (0-24 years) is diagnosed with cancer, essential support is available for the weeks, months or years ahead – from the moment of diagnosis, throughout treatment and beyond.

Redkite provides:

emotional support and counselling

A diagnosis of cancer is a crisis that impacts every aspect of life. Our skilled and caring social workers provide information, support and professional counselling not just for children and young people facing cancer, but for their families and caregivers too. This includes siblings and grandparents. They are available face to face and by phone or email, enabling us to reach families who need us including those who are remote or who prefer not to travel

financial assistance

Cancer is expensive, often bringing extra financial demands at a time when parents often must stop work, and lose income to be at their child's bedside. For young people living independently, financial pressures can be even greater. Financial assistance helps with the must-haves including food, electricity, accommodation and travel expenses.

education and career support

Cancer is extremely disruptive to education and employment for young people, both in the short term and potentially for life. Redkite's Education and Career Consultants work directly with young people, and along with our Education Grants and Scholarships helps them connect to meaningful education pathways. Career dreams and aspirations often have to change post cancer, so this support is vital and helps to build a hopeful future.

bereavement support

The grief that follows a child's or young person's death never goes away. Many bereaved parents, partners and siblings speak of deep loneliness. Bereavement counselling, individual support and group support are provided to families to help them find ways to live with grief and manage life, for as long as they need.

Redkite

supporting children, young people and their families facing cancer

Today in Australia, five families will be told their child has cancer.

No matter where they are, with your help Redkite is there for them.

Treatment can last for weeks, months or years. We're there with support for as long as it takes.

Today, more than 40,000 people are living with the effects of childhood cancer.

together we can make a difference

When a child or young person (0-24 years) is diagnosed with cancer, essential support is available for the weeks, months or years ahead – from the moment of diagnosis, throughout treatment and beyond.

Redkite provides:

emotional support and counselling

A diagnosis of cancer is a crisis that impacts every aspect of life. Our skilled and caring social workers provide information, support and professional counselling not just for children and young people facing cancer, but for their families and caregivers too. This includes siblings and grandparents. They are available face to face and by phone or email, enabling us to reach families who need us including those who are remote or who prefer not to travel

financial assistance

Cancer is expensive, often bringing extra financial demands at a time when parents often must stop work, and lose income to be at their child's bedside. For young people living independently, financial pressures can be even greater. Financial assistance helps with the must-haves including food, electricity, accommodation and travel expenses.

education and career support

Cancer is extremely disruptive to education and employment for young people, both in the short term and potentially for life. Redkite's Education and Career Consultants work directly with young people, and along with our Education Grants and Scholarships helps them connect to meaningful education pathways. Career dreams and aspirations often have to change post cancer, so this support is vital and helps to build a hopeful future.

bereavement support

The grief that follows a child's or young person's death never goes away. Many bereaved parents, partners and siblings speak of deep loneliness. Bereavement counselling, individual support and group support are provided to families to help them find ways to live with grief and manage life, for as long as they need.

Redkite

supporting children, young people and their families facing cancer

Today in Australia, five families will be told their child has cancer.

No matter where they are, with your help Redkite is there for them.

Treatment can last for weeks, months or years. We're there with support for as long as it takes.

Today, more than 40,000 people are living with the effects of childhood cancer.

together we can make a difference

When a child or young person (0-24 years) is diagnosed with cancer, essential support is available for the weeks, months or years ahead – from the moment of diagnosis, throughout treatment and beyond.

Redkite provides:

emotional support and counselling

A diagnosis of cancer is a crisis that impacts every aspect of life. Our skilled and caring social workers provide information, support and professional counselling not just for children and young people facing cancer, but for their families and caregivers too. This includes siblings and grandparents. They are available face to face and by phone or email, enabling us to reach families who need us including those who are remote or who prefer not to travel

financial assistance

Cancer is expensive, often bringing extra financial demands at a time when parents often must stop work, and lose income to be at their child's bedside. For young people living independently, financial pressures can be even greater. Financial assistance helps with the must-haves including food, electricity, accommodation and travel expenses.

education and career support

Cancer is extremely disruptive to education and employment for young people, both in the short term and potentially for life. Redkite's Education and Career Consultants work directly with young people, and along with our Education Grants and Scholarships helps them connect to meaningful education pathways. Career dreams and aspirations often have to change post cancer, so this support is vital and helps to build a hopeful future.

bereavement support

The grief that follows a child's or young person's death never goes away. Many bereaved parents, partners and siblings speak of deep loneliness. Bereavement counselling, individual support and group support are provided to families to help them find ways to live with grief and manage life, for as long as they need.

Redkite

supporting children, young people and their families facing cancer

Today in Australia, five families will be told their child has cancer.

No matter where they are, with your help Redkite is there for them.

Treatment can last for weeks, months or years. We're there with support for as long as it takes.

Today, more than 40,000 people are living with the effects of childhood cancer.

together we can make a difference

When a child or young person (0-24 years) is diagnosed with cancer, essential support is available for the weeks, months or years ahead – from the moment of diagnosis, throughout treatment and beyond.

Redkite provides:

emotional support and counselling

A diagnosis of cancer is a crisis that impacts every aspect of life. Our skilled and caring social workers provide information, support and professional counselling not just for children and young people facing cancer, but for their families and caregivers too. This includes siblings and grandparents. They are available face to face and by phone or email, enabling us to reach families who need us including those who are remote or who prefer not to travel

financial assistance

Cancer is expensive, often bringing extra financial demands at a time when parents often must stop work, and lose income to be at their child's bedside. For young people living independently, financial pressures can be even greater. Financial assistance helps with the must-haves including food, electricity, accommodation and travel expenses.

education and career support

Cancer is extremely disruptive to education and employment for young people, both in the short term and potentially for life. Redkite's Education and Career Consultants work directly with young people, and along with our Education Grants and Scholarships helps them connect to meaningful education pathways. Career dreams and aspirations often have to change post cancer, so this support is vital and helps to build a hopeful future.

bereavement support

The grief that follows a child's or young person's death never goes away. Many bereaved parents, partners and siblings speak of deep loneliness. Bereavement counselling, individual support and group support are provided to families to help them find ways to live with grief and manage life, for as long as they need.

Redkite

supporting children, young people and their families facing cancer

Today in Australia, five families will be told their child has cancer.

No matter where they are, with your help Redkite is there for them.

Treatment can last for weeks, months or years. We're there with support for as long as it takes.

Today, more than 40,000 people are living with the effects of childhood cancer.

together we can make a difference

When a child or young person (0-24 years) is diagnosed with cancer, essential support is available for the weeks, months or years ahead – from the moment of diagnosis, throughout treatment and beyond.

Redkite provides:

emotional support and counselling

A diagnosis of cancer is a crisis that impacts every aspect of life. Our skilled and caring social workers provide information, support and professional counselling not just for children and young people facing cancer, but for their families and caregivers too. This includes siblings and grandparents. They are available face to face and by phone or email, enabling us to reach families who need us including those who are remote or who prefer not to travel

financial assistance

Cancer is expensive, often bringing extra financial demands at a time when parents often must stop work, and lose income to be at their child's bedside. For young people living independently, financial pressures can be even greater. Financial assistance helps with the must-haves including food, electricity, accommodation and travel expenses.

education and career support

Cancer is extremely disruptive to education and employment for young people, both in the short term and potentially for life. Redkite's Education and Career Consultants work directly with young people, and along with our Education Grants and Scholarships helps them connect to meaningful education pathways. Career dreams and aspirations often have to change post cancer, so this support is vital and helps to build a hopeful future.

bereavement support

The grief that follows a child's or young person's death never goes away. Many bereaved parents, partners and siblings speak of deep loneliness. Bereavement counselling, individual support and group support are provided to families to help them find ways to live with grief and manage life, for as long as they need.

